The town of Herndon is situated on the western edge of Virginia's picturesque Fairfax County. In the 18th and early 19th centuries, this part of Fairfax County was primarily agricultural, and as additional settlers arrived, farming flourished. Early residents found woods, flat open fields, outcroppings of rocks, and workable soil throughout the region. By 1857, the installation of the railroad line brought summer residents, commuters, and real estate developers to the area. About the Author: In Images of America: Around Herndon, community historian Margaret C. Peck has collected over

200 archival photographs that highlight the people and places of Herndon and the small neighboring villages Margaret C Peck a lifelong resident of t
