Native American history can be intimidating to study with thousands of years of events and peoples to sift through. By focusing on a small specific region east central Indiana in this case Chris Flook gives the reader a great place to jump into a critical part of history that often goes ignored. Flook Native Americans lived hunted and farmed in east central Indiana for two thousand years before the area became a part of the Hoosier State. Mounds and enclosures built by Adena and Hopewell peoples still stand near the White River and reflect their vibrant and mysterious cultures. The Lenape tribes moved to east central Indiana many years later after the Northwest Indian War. Led by the great chiefs Buckhongeheles and Kikthawenund the White River Lenape attempted to fo About the Author Chris Flook is a lecturer of telecommunications at Ball State University. He teaches documentary filmmaking web design and motion graphics. In recent years he has advised student teams in the production of several documentaries including The
